PIQUANTS.

How to Court is Curious—A young gentleman happened to sit at a table in a new adjoining one in which a young lady for whom he was living a child and a talent passion, was desirous of entering into acquaintance on the spot, but this place not being suitable for a formal declaration the case suggested the following plan: He politely handed his fair neighbor a little opened, second Epistle of John, verse 2—And for I beseech thee, not as I write a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we have one another.

He returned it, pointing to the second chapter of Ruth, tenth verse: "Then she followed her face, and bowed herself to the ground and said to him: 'Why have I found grace in thy eyes, seeing I am a stranger?'"

He returned the book, pointing to the "Epistle of John," having many things to write unto you, I would not write with pen and ink, but I trust shortly to come unto you, and speak face to face, that our joy may be full."

From the above interview, a marriage took place the ensuing week.

"Ma, if I should die and go to heaven, should I wear any more-moans dress?"

"No, my love; we can surely suppose we shall wear the attire of this world in the next." Then tell me, my love, how the angels would come to the best society?"

"When a man loves a building lot is he blind? Don't know; but he has certainly been deprived of his site."

An Irishman says he can see no earthly reasons why women should not be allowed to become medical men.

A young man wrote an article for a temperance paper, and quoted, "Give me a cat in the valley I love," which appeared, "Give me a lot in the valley I love."

"You call that a trunk, do you?" growled a dejected porter. "It only needs a lightning-rod to make it look like a boarding-house."

A man in Stratford, Connecticut, has made a picture frame out of one thousand and five hundred small pieces, with a pen-knife.

Ten kettles are decidedly Yankee in their utility—they sing through no more.

"If your sister, while engaged with a sweetheart, asks you to bring a glass of water from an adjoining room, start on the errand, but you need not return. You will not be missed. Don't forget this little boy!"

"A young lady shouldn't be unhappy because she isn't quite as tall as she would like to be. It is a very easy thing to get speed."

An editor down South says he has been six weeks in a rural journal kept at the head of the local column: "Boy wanted at this office."

After days since the editor's wife presented him with a boy, which shows the value of advertising.

A countryman was sowing his ground in two rows follows come riding along that way, when one of them called to him in an unusual air: "Well, honest fellow," said he, "it is your business to sow, but we shall reap the fruits of your hard labor." To which the countryman replied: "It is very likely you may, for I am sowing hemp."

"How many regular, steady boarders are there in this house?" asked a census taker of a servant girl. "There's fifteen boarders in all, sir; but not more'n four o' em is steady persons, sir. The rest is Democrats."

"Doctor, do you think that being is bad for consumption?" "Not at all, madam; it's what it lives on."

"If Adam's life had been spared, it is said he would be 7500 years old on the 15th of next month. A respectable old gentleman."

It was recently stated in a public address, that the rum shops of New York, if placed in line, would extend on both sides of Broadway from the Battery to Central Park—ten miles of death—six stories high—four stories above ground, and two under. The estimated earnings of these haunts of distilled damnation is not far from $200,000,000 per annum, while their cost to the community is simply incalculable. Indeed, so profitable has been this rum-runnin' business, that its licentious proprietors have been willing to pay for licenses to the Metropolitan Board of Excise, within the last thirteen months, the enormous amount of over two millions and six hundred thousand dollars—a sum sufficient to liquidate the entire debt of the city, within the next six years.

How to Cure a Cold—The moment a man is seized he has taken cold let him do three things: First, eat nothing; second, go to bed, cover up in a room; third, drink as much cold water as he can, or as he wants, or as much herb tea as he can; and in three cases out of four, he will be well in thirty-six hours.

CHANGE IN THE ELEVATION OF LAND.

A remarkable evidence of the change in the relative level of land and sea is afforded on the Bay of Fundy, a few miles north of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. Here, at a distance of at least a quarter of a mile from the beach, are the distinct water marks of a former sea level. A line runs along the face of the ledge, well defined, and below its level minute sea shells, and even petrified kelp have been found in the interstices of the rock. Now the limit of the waters of the bay, even at the highest tides, is distant from the ancient sea level at least twelve hundred feet, which is a gradually ascending plateau of sand, shells, gravel, and stones, unproductive of vegetation except a few patches of sedges. The absence of soil would seem to denote that the change in land level here was comparatively modern, and the land intervening between the present and former water line, being composed of the same materials as the sea bottom, seems to indicate that the bottom has been exposed either by its rising or the subsidence of the water.

When, however, a boy, fishing in a little cove of Narragansett Bay under the shadow of a grove, the trees of which grew within a few feet of the high tide line, he found when landing the boat's "painter," some fifteen feet long, was usually tied to one of the trees. When last there, the water line had receded from the trees about fifteen feet, and a shelving shore, the relative level of the sea and land having changed at least twenty inches in about as many years. Curious to know the reason, and believing the wash of the rains had gradually filled the bed of the estuary, we tested the matter by a simple experiment. There was a flat submerged rock, about forty feet from the shore, on which, at high tide, there was about four feet of water. Now there was at the same state of the tide in the same month of the year, by measurement, only twenty-eight inches of water on the rock. No accumulation of sand washing could have produced this result; the bottom of the estuary had risen or been lifted up twenty inches in twenty years.

The changes made by the washing of the surf in gradually undermining and encroaching upon the land are noticeable on almost all exposed shores unless guarded by cliffs of stone. Many of our seaside watering places give marked evidences of such encroachments. Summer resorts which a few years ago possessed fruitful gardens or verdant lawns sloping towards the water, have lost these pleasant appendages, and in some cases the sites of houses and groves have been threatened, if not made dangerous, by these encroachments. The writer from whom we have quoted says, further, in relation to these encroachments on the coast of New Jersey: "This wearing of the waves is especially visible in the Southern part of this State. Cape May, the Atlantic shore of Cape May County, from fifteen to thirty feet above the high water mark, has been washed away, and their places supplied by flat and sloping sands. In some sections they wear away more rapidly than in others. Dr. Leaning and other residents of the vicinity think that the Seven Mile Beach opposite Seaville has worn away one hundred yards during the past twenty years.

The shore in front of the boarding-house at Cape Island must have worn nearly a mile since the Revolutionary War. This is the opinion of Mr. Ezekiel Stephens, whose father resided on the spot. During the Revolution military artillery used to practice firing at this point. Their gun was stationed near a house which stood just beyond the present beach line, and their target was just three-quarters of a mile out. Beyond this beach line extended for nearly a quarter of a mile before reaching the shore. The sea has washed away the whole of this ground, and one of the boarding-houses has been removed twice to escape being swept away. Within a few years the bank has been protected by a covering of cedar brush, and the wear has been so perceptible.

A remarkable evidence of the wearing of the bay shore of the country is related. The grandmother of Aaron Leaning was buried in 1831, at Towns, in a graveyard some distance inland of the town. In 1834, the graves were about fifty rods from the shore, and ruins of the houses were apparent. Now the grave yard has been washed away, and at dead low-water mark, the marks of three walls, remnants of the town built between the shore and the graveyard, can be seen. Mr. Price,

ALLIE'S GIFT.

It was in June, when the roses were in their prime, and the air was laden with their perfume, that Richard Crandall, with a small bundle in his hand, crept from the house stealthily, and darted quickly away. The sun had not yet risen, and everything was quiet and still in the morning twilight. He stole along the little path in the orchard and soon stood in front of a large white house, surrounded by trees and flowers of almost every variety. No one was stirring within; all was silent as the tomb. He looked long and wistfully toward one of the windows of the house, and at last he called timidly to the sleeper within.

Allie, he said, look out of the window. No answer was made, and he called again, this time with more boldness. The shutter was thrown open, and a bright head, with its wealth of golden curls, appeared at the window.

Allie, whispered the boy, I am going away, and I want you to come down and see me before I go. I'll be down in a minute, was answered, in a pretty, childish voice. And the golden curls disappeared.

In a few moments, which seemed like hours to the anxious boy, the door was opened cautiously, and Allie Drummond came stealing out. Her shoes were untied, and her pretty curls had seen neither comb nor brush that morning. Dick, said she, are you running away? Yes, said the lad, in a solemn tone, and I'm going to stay till I am a rich man. I can't bear to stay at home any longer, and be treated like a dog; though if mother were alive I'd bear anything rather than leave her.

The sweet, blue eyes of the little girl were filled with wonder and sympathy. Dick, said she, I shan't take any more comfort after you are gone; but you will be much happier, and I'm glad you are going, and when you get to be a great man, and are rich, then you can come back, and we will be married together, and never part any more.

Yes, said Dick, that is just what I am going to do; but it will be a good many years before I can come back, and you'll see a great many handsome men, and you may forget me. Forget you? Why, Dick, you know better, said the child, pointing. If I never come back, I'll never get married in all the world. Are you going to the great city that Uncle Alden told us about?

I don't know, Allie, said the boy; I have only five dollars, and that will not carry me far. I shall go to the city if I can. They were silent a moment, then Allie said: Dick, I must give you a keepsake, so that you'll not forget to come back to me. Wait here a moment till I come. Softly she stole into the house and up to her room.

Now, said she to herself, he has got five dollars, and I'll give him the money papa gave me yesterday to buy that necktie I liked so much. She drew it from her purse, a five-dollar bill. That will make ten dollars, said she; out what are ten dollars for? Sister Jane pays ten dollars a week for her board. She went to a trunk, and taking there from a little white box, she opened it, and there lay a beautiful diamond-pin. Aunt Emma gave me this, said she, softly, to wear when I am grown up; but they say it is worth a great deal of money, and I would much rather that Dick would have it than wear it myself.

So she placed the five dollars beside it in the box, and tied the cover on snugly; and putting it in her pocket, she glided down the stairs again and out to the great elm-trees where Dick was waiting for her.

CRISBROOKE CASTLE, ENG. LAND.

One mile from Newport stands the venerable but dismantled Castle of Crisbrooke. This castle was built soon after the invasion of England by William the Conqueror, otherwise William the Bastard, by a cousin of William, between 1066 and the year 1100. Queen Elizabeth enlarged it by twenty acres, against the Spanish invasion. Here King Charles First of England threw himself upon the hospitality of his Governor, who betrayed him, according to Hume, to the Long Parliament. The latter kept him in this castle for eight months, 1647-48, away from his attendants, a very close prisoner, in daily expectation of assassination. The king turned grey, was bent, and very illly clad; he spoke his grey discolored head, while the Parliament issued frequent bulletins assuring the people of the king's comfort and improved health. Vide Hume. His two children were here imprisoned the year after his own death, and one of them perished in the castle. Cromwell sent the other one to Holland. King Charles's prison, from which he twice attempted escapes, is shown to visitors. The old wood-gate, erected in 1464, still does duty. Above the gate are vaults with furnaces to heat lead, ready to pour upon any storming party that forced an entrance. Some portions of the wall in this old fort are 18 feet thick. In the fort is a magnificent well, many hundred years old, laid up in beautifully cut stone, near 10 feet diameter at the top, 310 feet deep; it was sunk in 1150 by Baldwin de Redvers, and is equal to the best mining job on the Pacific. Water to a beleaguered fortress is of the greatest importance, and this well has 90 feet of water. The water is of the best quality, clear as crystal, and is supplied to all curious visitors by a dokey at two cents per glass. That most patient and best abused of the animal creation, steps a request into a large wheel, attached to which is a madras, with a rope and a bucket of the size of a half barrel. At the word he starts with a cargo and winds till it reaches the top, high, many of them covered with living trees, have been washed away, and their places supplied by flat and sloping sands. In some sections they wear away more rapidly than in others. Dr. Leaning and other residents of the vicinity think that the Seven Mile Beach opposite Seaville has worn away one hundred yards during the past twenty years.

THE JANEVILLE GAZETTE.

Lee & Shepard of Boston have in press, for publication this fall, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, in verse, by Rev. E. Porter Dyer, pastor of the Congregational church at Shrewsbury. Begun, at first, for the purpose of private refreshment and study, found out and eagerly perused by family and friends, and finally listened to by parishioners, this metrical version of Bunyan's great allegory has already, in some sense, proved its popularity and justified the experiment of verse. Mr. Dyer, as his friends know, has a very happy faculty for "dropping into poetry,"—expressing his thoughts in rhythm and rhyme, and in the few pages of his Bunyan that we have seen he seems to have done equal justice to the illustrious author and himself. We do not doubt that his version will introduce Bunyan to many new readers, and bring fresh acquaintance and delight to multitudes of old ones.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOW IN NEW YORK.
By Matthew Hale Smith. Illustrated: 784 pp. Hartford, Conn. J. B. Burd & Co. 1868.

This little book, issued by the enterprising and successful publishing house of J. B. Burd & Co. of Hartford, Conn., is one of those really valuable works which from time to time burst upon the public, and carry their publishers on to deserved fortune. Spicy, piquant, and full of matter not only readable, but profitable, it must find itself in the hands of everybody, old or young, who has been in New York, or expects or desires to go, or who would learn the whole country by the pulses at its commercial heart. Ninety-two separate chapters constitute the book, covering an amount of facts never before collected upon the like subjects, and holding up the city of New York as in a mirror, revealing its worst and its best aspects at the same time, and letting the reader into the secrets which have inspired the successes of its nobles, as well as lifting the veil which hides from the observation of most, the veiling sins and infirmities of the mighty metropolis of America.

Packard's Monthly for October contains the following articles:—Aunt Rachel and her Favorite Song; Whom are you going to vote for? U.S. by Olive Logan; Out upon a Boundless Sea; Short Secular Sermons; Thinking Aloud; How Newspapers are made;—The New York Tribune's Economic Business Men; Paste; The Great London Advertiser; Songs and Songsters of Labor, &c.

Now ready for 1868! The Illustrated Annual of Phrenology and Physiology, containing nearly fifty portraits of distinguished characters—Civilized and savage. The true basis of Education; uses of Culture; How to Study Feels; a Convention of the Faculties; Nature's Noblemen: Eminent Clergymen: Power of Example: Choice of Pursuits, or, What Can I do Best? Mirthfulness, Wit, Humor with Illustrations; Traits of Victor Cousin, Harpworth Dixon, Wilkie Collins, Rev. John Cummings, author and prophet; Blind Tom, Artemus Ward; Alex. Dumas; Mrs. Ritchie, Mr. Julian; with Indiana, Camille, and others. Richer in Matter and Illustration, than ever before, everybody will want to read it. Only 25 cents. S. R. Lord Dudley, who was given to absent-mindedness, was once paying a morning visit to the beautiful Lady M. He sat unconsciously long time, and the lady, after giving him some friendly hints, took up her work and tried to make conversation. Lord Dudley broke a long fit of silence by muttering, "A very pretty woman this Lady M. I wish she'd go. He thought Lady M. was paying him a visit at his own house."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 28, 1867. Mr. Editor:—While in Weymouth a number of gentlemen said that the Hill had passed that gives them a pension for services in 1812. I send you the bill as it passed the House of Representatives and was laid on the table when it got to the senate. Your readers will be better satisfied by a perusal of the bill. TUNNER TOMMY.

An Act Granting pension to certain soldiers and sailors of the war of eighteen hundred and twelve. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension rolls the names of such of the surviving officers and enlisted and drafted men, including militia and volunteers, of the military and naval service of the United States who served consecutively for three months in the war with Great Britain of eighteen hundred and twelve, and who were honorably discharged, and who at no time during the late rebellion have adhered to the cause of the enemies of the government, giving them aid and comfort, but who were constantly and continuously loyal to the government, and can truthfully take and subscribe the oath contained in the act of July two, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, and who are in circumstances which render them dependent on others for support.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That this act shall not apply to any person who is dependent upon others for support based upon a valuable consideration, nor to any person who is receiving a pension at the rate of eight dollars, or more, per month, nor shall it be construed so as to allow more than one pension to the same person. Persons under this act shall be at the rate of eight dollars per month, and shall be paid to the persons entitled thereto at that rate from and after the passage of this act, for and during the term of their natural lives.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That before the name of any person shall be placed on the pension rolls under this act, proof shall be made, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, that the applicant is entitled to a pension under the provisions of this act. The loss of a certificate of discharge shall not deprive the applicant of the benefits of this act, but other proof of services performed and of an honorable discharge, if satisfactory, shall be deemed sufficient.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the pension herein allowed shall not be liable to seizure, levy, attachment, or other process to satisfy any debt, domestic or foreign, or other liability, nor shall any contract, bargain, or agreement in relation thereto be valid or binding upon the pensioner, nor shall the same be paid to any one having any claim upon such pensioner or interest in the fund, but the same shall be paid to the pensioner in person or to a disinterested agent or attorney thereto, authorized by a power executed subsequently to the accruing of the sum to be received. Provided, That when an agent shall be employed to prepare the necessary proof and make the application, he shall be allowed for his entire service in and about the prosecution of the claim the sum of ten dollars, and no more. And if any person concerned as aforesaid, shall, for his services, or as a gratuity, or under any pretext whatsoever, demand, accept, or retain a greater sum than the sum of ten dollars, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall refund the same, and shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars and imprisoned not exceeding six months. That the provisions of sections twelve and thirteen of an act entitled "An act supplementary to 'An act to grant pensions,' approved July four, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and of sections two, three, and four of an act entitled 'An act supplementary to 'An act to grant pensions,' approved July four, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be applicable to the pensions granted by this act.

Passed the House of Representatives February 18, 1868. Attest: EDWARD McPHERSON, Clerk.

The Philadelphia Press says that "Brick" Pomerooy will not engage any devil for his new paper, being already possessed of one.

Richard walked home with Alice that night, and her young friend declared that his bosom, and kissed her drooping eye.

My darling, said he, you shall never regret your faithfulness to me. I will be to you father, mother and husband. He sat down, and drew her down beside him. Were you so very poor, said Alice, that you must sell that diamond-pin? Allie, said he, you will not be angry with me, will you, when I tell you the whole story? The timid blue eyes were raised longingly to his face. No, I will not be angry, she said. Tell me when.

When I left you, Richard began, I came immediately to this city. I arrived here in the evening, and never having been in the city before, I knew not where to go. I took my bundle and walked along the street, and suddenly I heard screams and the prancing of hoofs. I looked up and saw a span of gray horses dashing down the street at a rapid pace. The people were screaming Whoo from every direction, but the horses seemed to go faster and faster. As they came nearly opposite to where I stood, I threw my bundle on the ground, and rushed toward them. You remember how much your father used to praise me for the management of horses, I caught the foaming animals by their bridles, standing directly in front of them, and spoke to them soothingly. They tossed their heads, and I was lifted from my feet; but others then rushed to my assistance, and the horses were calmed. There was a lady and her child in the carriage, who proved to be the wife and daughter of Mr. Daggett, one of the wealthiest merchants in the city. The lady insisted on my riding home with her, and I was only too glad to do so; taking a seat beside the coachman, we soon stopped at an elegant mansion. Mr. Daggett was my esteem and affection at once. He seemed much affected when his wife told him of the accident, and he took me by the hand and thanked me over and over, while he inquired into my history. After I had concluded the account of myself:

Well, my lad, said he, what shall I do for you in part payment for the great favor you have done me and mine? Nothing, said I, to pay for what I have done, for it was only my duty; but I am in a great city alone, and if you will give me work, it shall I ask. You are a brave lad, said the kind gentleman, and I have a place for you in my store.

It was just the place I wanted most, and tears of gratitude came into my eyes. The next night I opened the little box you gave me, Allie, and I wept like a child over it. With the five dollars it contained, I purchased this gold-on-circle on my finger, and the diamond-pin I have fondly gazed upon every day since. I continued in the store, rising steadily and rapidly, until I was taken in as a junior partner.

Why, said Allie, I thought you were very poor. I have not finished yet, said Richard, smiling. Last fall, continued he, I found myself able to support a wife in elegant style; and with my heart beating fast with hope and fear, I went back to Oakville, and called at your father's door. Madge answered my call; but she did not know me, and I asked her concerning the family. She told me the death of your parents, and that you were in New York City to spend the winter. She gave me your directions, then added that she heard you had found a nice lover there, and were going to marry him. I hastened back to the city, my fears increased and my hopes diminished. I did not call at your friend's house, but planned a little ruse for proving your affection and nobleness of heart. Mrs. Green, who lives in this house has been my landlady for years, and is a kind and honest woman. I told my plan to her, and engaged her little son, Ben, to assist me. You know the rest, Allie, but you do not know how anxiously I awaited the result, nor what a flood of happiness ran through my heart when I felt your lips upon my brow. Now, Allie, can you forgive me?

There was a rosy blush on the cheeks of the young girl, and a prouder light came into her eyes. Yes, yes, I forgive you, Richard; but had I known that you were a wealthy gentleman, I would have been less demonstrative. Then I have fresh reason to be glad that I played an untruth; but I forgot to tell you that I have been sick, and am fast recovering. Richard walked home with Alice that night, and her young friend declared that his bosom, and kissed her drooping eye.

My father and mother are dead, said she, a moisture gathering in her eyes; and I must act for myself. The young man gathered her closer to his bosom, and kissed her drooping eye.

NOTES OF A TRAVELLER.

No. 2.

Dear Gazette—Chambersburg, the county seat of Franklin County, is closely nestled at the base of the Blue Ridge range of mountains, at the foot of the richest valley in the state (the Cumberland). It contains about six thousand inhabitants, and is the nearest town in the valley, west of Harrisburg. All of the buildings are of brick, new, and of a modern style and architecture, in this differing from any of the other towns in this section, (they having a remarkably old and Dutch appearance,) showing at first glance the enterprise, but on further investigation lack of judgment on the part of its citizens. The reason of its fine appearance is seen in the fact, that during the war the whole town was levelled to the ground by fire, the work of the rebels, and since its close, has been rebuilt. Previous to the rebuilding of it, you could not see a house where now stand ninety-eight brick buildings, four blocks of six stories each, two banks, two hotels, and a court house. The streets and sidewalks have been graded and paved, making it quite a young city in appearance.

The people tell us a story, as they point to the dome of the court house, on which is a statue of Benjamin Franklin, of rebel discrimination, and take in the fine arts. As they saw the building away, first one side and then the other, and fall with a crash, they rushed for the statue on the dome, (which was the same as the one now there) and destroyed it, thinking it was President Lincoln.

The State gave the inhabitants $800,000, and by subscription there was raised $300,000 more, in the various states, and here, it seems to me, they failed in judgment, for they borrowed largely, and put up their nice buildings, and now, in the midst of wealth, they are poor; property poor, large interests to pay, and a large borrowed money debt yet unpaid. They are all poor; even great stores, and not one buys for cash, all on time and long time.

Still, in view of these facts staring them in the face, I found a great many men who were rank rebels; men who told me they saw their plumes drawn into the middle of their parlors, piled with furniture and burned, their family treasures and keepsakes and their homes destroyed, their property, the result of the labor of years, laid waste to satiate a wicked desire of a more wicked enemy, and they left homeless. Still they are ready to place the affairs of our country in the hands of men who to-day foster that same rebel feeling in their bosoms, and bow to those who robbed them of their all. Don't think that this class are in the majority—not at all; but they must leave this town, and let the Nov. election settle the matter for them. Voted them out, words fail.

We journey on up through the valley to Harrisburg, from which we will start in our next.

HARRISBURG.

Harrisburg, the capital city of Pennsylvania, is beautifully located on the eastern bank of the Susquehanna river, and although there are some very fine buildings there, it is for a capital a very inferior city, its location being its redeeming feature. For the last few years there has been but little change, and it has a decidedly old fashioned appearance.
It was formerly a very busy, thriving place, being the market to which the products of the Cumberland Valley, and all of the surrounding country, was sent; but the enterprise of the people of the outside towns has robbed it of its main business, by erecting at convenient points along the railroad, forwarding houses, which enables the farmers to send their grain and produce to the cities, where they will demand the highest market prices.

There are many stores in the place, but the business in that line is done on a very small margin; there is a rolling mill within its limits, being the only mill or factory there. The houses that do the best business are the hotels, of which there are three good ones, and during the sessions of the legislature, they do a large business. The best one, the Jones House, was obliged to close this spring, on account of want of business, and the others would be similarly affected was it not for the patronage of "Gorillas" as travelling men are called.
(I believe we've had a more christian name given us lately, that of miss injuries.) But we must leave this city and take the cars at the Central depot, we are off for the west, on the best railroad of its length in the country, (the Penn.
Central). Five miles above the city we cross the Susquehanna river, on a bridge one and a half miles long, and winding up under the base of the mon-tains, leaving the Susquehanna, and following the course of the little Juniata, which is bridged thirteen times by the Central railroad, we find ourselves, after about five hours ride, at Altoona, the end of the middle division of the road.

Here we change cars, and take the train for Pittsburg. On leaving the station we almost immediately commence on an up grade, and at a high rate of speed.
We find on examination that there are two engines ahead and one behind, attached to our train, and all working furiously.
We are going over the Allegheny Mountains. The passengers all crowded to the seats on the left side of the car, in order to view the beautiful scenery spread out before us as far as the eye could reach, growing more and more beautiful as we continued to ascend.
Our attention is called across the ravine to a mountain peak near, and from its summit far above us, curving around its side in a very quick descent, we notice a railroad, which seems to connect with the one we are on far ahead of us.
While wondering where it could come from, and what used for, we see from our window in the back car, two engines going up on it, and on looking find they are the two engines ahead of our train.
We are turning the famous Horse Shoe, so well known by all excursionists who travel this country in the summer. The front of our train is going due west, while the back is going due west, the road making a full curve of half a circle, in the distance of sixteen miles; hence its name, the Horse Shoe. We look down, down the ravine, to its bottom, and the firm houses look like the black houses of our childhood days. Our engines are all working and tugging to their utmost, and we hear the exclamations of surprise, and admiration, at the beauty of the scenery as we ascend to the summit. Here passing through a tunnel one and eight miles long, we find ourselves at the town of Galeitz, thirty two hundred and eighty feet above the level of the sea. Here our engines which came to assist are dismissed, and we continue our journey west. Passing the town of Cresson we have full view of the Mountain House, at the Cresson Springs, a very popular Summer resort for people from all parts of the country.
Among the guests at the House this summer was the wife of our lamented President, with her son, since left for Europe. After a ride of four hours we find ourselves in Pittsburg, from which place will write next week.

EMPT SLEEVES.—Mr. Editor: In our streets, in our offices, on our farms, everywhere, we meet "empty sleeves" sleeves that the wind blows against broken ribs, whips about crippled bodies; sleeves whose emptiness tells of arms blown off in battle, of arms lost in strife for a nation, of arms shattered with flail in hand. Empty sleeves that speak more eloquently than tongue or type of patriotism, of courage, of faith in the right, of hope in justice; empty sleeves that tell of honor applied, of a nation saved, of homes defended, of valor, of duty; empty sleeves that tell how desperately Rebellion fought against the life of a people; empty sleeves that tell how well the defenders of that people did their glorious work; empty sleeves that ever proclaim how lives were risked, and limbs sacrificed, in putting down those who fired on the nation's flag, and trailed it in the dust; empty sleeves that constantly rebuke those who did their utmost to make Slavery national, and Freedom sectional; empty sleeves that tell of Southern prisons, of "dead lines" around human cattle pens, of abuse, of needless suffering, of starvation; empty sleeves, whose wearers are living reminders of Liberty, of Andersonville, and those other hells in which Union Soldiers who fought for the old flag of liberty against the Rebel flag of Slavery, were tortured, and bruised, and starved and murdered, and denied decent burial when dead; empty sleeves that tell of the tenacity of human slavery, and the determination of a Southern Minority to hold it over and rule a Northern Majority. Are the honorable and honored men whose armless sleeves meet us at every turn, going for the party that fired on old Sumpter? Are these men going to tell the world that the side on which they fought was wrong?
Are these men about to tell the world that the old flag ought to have been trailed in the dust at Sumpter? Are they going to say that Grant ought to have surrendered to Lee—that the rebel flag ought now to wave from the dome of the National Capitol? If these brave men desire to speak truth, and to see the rebel flag on every Flag Staff in the land they will vote for Seymour; but if they believe they fought on the right side—believe that Grant was right in emerging Lee's surrender—believe that the old Flag of our fathers is the flag of the nation—then they will vote for Grant.

HOW TO PLAY A GRAND
FLUTE CONCERTO.

[The following bit of advice, from C sharp to his friends, Philistines, is too good to be lost to the world, so we enbalm it in our pages.]

MY DEAR PHILISTINE:—As soon as your turn arrives you will, of course, keep the audience waiting some little time in expectation—it does them good, whets the appetite, and makes them curious—stay until they get tolerably fil-laged, and then make your appearance.
Now mind! a grand Concerto always begins with a row—or else it can't be grand so tell your friend who just secured it for you, not to spare the brass. Well then, you commence with a crash, key of C, all the instruments starting in un-ison. Now the strains move onward, Andante maestoso, you stand watching your music, with your flute cast negligently into the hollow of your arm, and your hand so gracefully on one side as you can manage to get it. Having told your friend or what popular air you have composed your concerto or fantasia, he will, if he be a clever fellow, touch upon a little during the introduction, while you, occasionally—only occasionally—mind me!—will put the flute to your lips, and play a bar or two of it, just to show the folks you could play the introduction, if it was not "infra dig," and you happened to be in the humor; however, let that pass. The orchestra are reaching a climax, climbing, climbing, and bearing your flute on the top of their accumulated lunacy, until you can come together upon another crash, more stupendous, if possible, than the first.
Dominant seventh upon C, you holding the tippermost B flat. The crash over, the orchestra is silent, leaving you flourishing in the air with your "frescino" B flat, a long, liquid, melting, stream-note, which you hold out as long as you can without endangering the windpipe or getting too red in the face. Then come scattering and tumbling down, as fast as possible, with all sorts of skips and leaps, quips and quorks
